Your iPhone knows where you've been

CNN

News that iPhones and iPad 3Gs apparently collect continuous information about the whereabouts of their users and store that data in a secret file has lots of Apple fans worried about their privacy.

Two researchers on Wednesday unveiled the details of this secret file, called "consolidated.db," which stores location info going back to June. That's when Apple updated its mobile operating system, called iOS, to version 4.0. Apple hasn't commented on these allegations, and it appears the company does not have continuous access to this location data, according to the researchers, one of whom says he is a former Apple employee. Congress and the FCC are investigating the matter.

All of this may be confusing for iPhone owners, especially since this news terrifies some and seems like a lot of fun to others. To help clear things up, here's a quick round-up of what you need to know about iPhone tracking and your security:

How does the iPhone collect this location data?

It uses cell phone towers to triangulate an approximate location. This isn't as accurate as GPS, which uses satellites to pinpoint a phone's whereabouts.

How often is a location recorded?

At seemingly random intervals but fairly often, according to Pete Warden and Alasdair Allan, the researchers and journalists who publicized this secret location file.

Where is this data stored?

On the mobile device and on the computer the device is synced to.

Who has access to it?

In theory, only you. Apple does not appear to have access to this data, at least not on a real-time basis, according to the researchers. So it appears the company doesn't know where you are right now.

Mobile phone companies also collect this type of data, but, as the researchers point out, that data "normally requires a court order to gain access to it, whereas this is available to anyone who can get their hands on your phone or computer."

The location file is unencrypted, so anyone with access to your phone or computer could, in theory, get access to it and know where you've been. The researchers, in their report, say Apple has "made it possible for anyone from a jealous spouse to a private investigator to get a detailed picture of your movements."

Could someone steal this data?

It's possible someone could look at this file and know where you've been since June. But that person would have to gain access to your phone or your computer, where the consolidated.db file is stored.

What if I want to see a map of all the places I've been?

Some people are having fun looking at maps of where they've been over the course of 10 months. The researchers who publicized this file also created an open-source program called iPhone Tracker, which is free for download and can be used to create a map of everywhere you've been since the tracking started.

Madea battle won't go away

Ding, ding, ding.

The pop culture ring is set for the showdown of "Madea" versus "Mookie."

Filmmaker Tyler Perry unleashed an arsenal of pent-up rage about longtime detractor Spike Lee during a Tuesday press conference for his "Madea's Big Happy Family."

"I'm so sick of hearing about damn Spike Lee," Perry said when asked about Lee's past criticisms of his work, Box Office Magazine reported. "Spike can go straight to hell! ... I am sick of him talking about me, I am sick of him saying, 'This is a coon, this is a buffoon.'"

(Forgive yourself if you read that quote in a Madea voice. I did the same.)

Though I too have criticized Perry's works in the past, I understand his frustration, especially since it's abundantly clear the box office gods typically do not smile as brightly upon his more serious works.

For example, "Madea Goes to Jail," raked in $41.1 million and set records during its opening weekend. Meanwhile, Perry's Madea-less "Daddy's Little Girls," about a doting black father, is among his lowest-ranking films to date.

Perry also makes a tremendous effort to put talented black actors in lead roles, a rarity in a still homogenous industry. Who else but Perry has granted generous screen time to the iconic Maya Angelou and Cicely Tyson? And who could downplay his casting of Phylicia Rashad, Thandie Newton, Whoopi Goldberg and a surprisingly skilled Macy Gray in "For Colored Girls?"

The last time the pop world saw such a colorful, quality list of leading ladies, it was in "The Color Purple" in 1985.

Columbia College Chicago professor Stephanie Shonekan also questions the severity of Lee and other's criticism of Perry, defining his dramedy perspective as "just one lens."

"It seems Spike Lee would like the black experience viewed through only his lens, or his aesthetic, but there must be space for everyone," Shonekan said. "If this is Perry's way of creating his path to the American dream, it's his way. If Spike Lee and others want to see more than Tyler Perry, then they need to make more films."

It's hard to accept for those who wish he'd do more with his resources, but Perry cannot be expected to ensure that each of his characters and plot lines reflects the full facet of the black experience. And the blue dress-wearing, gun-toting grandma "Madea" clearly is not to blame for all that ails black images in pop culture.

Instead of criticizing Perry, detractors should start encouraging him—once, a homeless playwright—to offer a video-based fundraising course aimed at helping underrepresented groups better infiltrate film and TV.

Maybe then, more minority voices could be heard ... right alongside Madea's.

On the edge of the law

Chicago Tribune

While BASE jumping is not referenced in any city ordinance, jumpers can be cited with disorderly or reckless conduct or trespassing.

BASE jumping is considered more dangerous than skydiving because there is less time before impact and jumps sometimes are done close to cliffs, buildings and cables. Dozens of people around the world have reportedly died while BASE jumping in the past several decades.

"It is obviously an activity that can pose a danger to that individual as well as bystanders, pedestrians and motorists," Chicago police spokesman Officer John Mirabelli said.

To avoid detection, jumpers say they scout out locations. Construction areas are easier to access. An elevated parking garage near a jump site can help make the landing and escape discreet.

Jumps are often executed at night, preferably under a full moon's light, said Billy Bob Wawak, who has been skydiving in Illinois for 18 years and has jumped at Idaho's Perrine Bridge, where it is legal.

"Ninety percent of [their] jumps, you'll never know about," Wawak said.

If the public does find out, it's usually because something has gone wrong.

In October 2006, Chicago detectives arrested two men for BASE jumping downtown after a security camera caught them on tape. The men—John Winkelkotter, known as "Johnny Utah," and Patrick Walker—were charged with disorderly conduct. Court records show that their cases were thrown out.

Little more than a decade before, an Algonquin man was arrested when his parachute caught on the cable of a radio antenna in McHenry County.

CHUTES TO THRILL

Botched Chicago BASE jump offers glimpse of secret world

Chicago Tribune

Standing atop the unfinished skyscraper, Shaun Walters thought he spotted a white taxi idling 26 stories below. It seemed like the perfect getaway car.

So he waited for a traffic signal to turn red, curled his toes over the building's edge and hurtled into the April night, the city unspooling around him until his parachute popped open overhead, delivering him gently to the ground.

But euphoria vanished when Walters, 44, realized his escape vehicle actually was a Chicago police car with an amused, yet firm, officer standing nearby.

"It was game over for me," Walters said, grinning as he recalled the recent arrest. "Quite a few unprintable words went through my head, but I went quietly."

Nonchalance defines Walters, who is part of a small and elusive thrill-seeking community of BASE jumpers who travel the world in search of objects from which to leap. Their name comes from the objects they seek—buildings, antennas, spans (bridges) and earth (usually cliffs).

Drawn by pleasant weather and scores of tall buildings, BASE jumpers say they long have drifted into Chicago during spring and summer to take advantage of the city's lofty perches.

But because of the illegal and dangerous nature of their hobby, they remain a clandestine society, obeying an outlaw code of honor: Don't talk about BASE jumping. Don't leave evidence behind. And most of all, don't get caught. BASE jumpers who bring undue attention to a location risk banishment for effectively "burning a site."

They also may face steep fines if they have to be rescued by local authorities, who recognize the activity as extremely hazardous, not only to the jumper but to nearby pedestrians and motorists as well.

Walters regrets that his stunt might have increased scrutiny of his jump site at North Clark Street and West Wacker Drive. But his arrest and subsequent reckless conduct misdemeanor charge, which carries a maximum punishment of one year in jail, will not stop him from BASE jumping again.

"I can't resist it," Walters said. "It's not just the jump; it's the whole process. Everything in your mind is telling you not to let go, and you have to overcome that fear."

About six years ago, Walters sold his home in England and left his family, including a son, to skydive and BASE jump around the world.

Waiting for a train at America's Historic Roundhouse in Aurora on a recent Thursday morning, Walters sipped a whiskey and attempted to describe the rush of plummeting toward the earth.

"There is just a feeling of total freedom when the wind picks up, 'Whooooo,' " Walters roared, his blue eyes opening wide. "And then another huge surge of adrenaline and you're alive."

DID YOU KNOW?

Industry experts estimate that there still are only about 2,500-3,000 regular practitioners worldwide, and only a fraction are "BASE bums"—people who work a job for several months and spend the rest of the year jumping.

Shaun Walters was arrested after BASE jumping off an unfinished skyscraper in Chicago—and landing next to a police car. "It was game over for me," Walters said.

Grant Park market under consideration

Chicago Tribune

Grant Park could soon boast an array of fine meats and cheeses.

Bensidoun USA—the same company that operates a French Market in the Ogilvie Transportation Center—is in negotiations with the Chicago Park District to manage a seasonal farmers market along Michigan Avenue near the south end of the park.

The market could be up and running as early as Memorial Day Weekend and stay open through October, according to park district spokeswoman Zvezdana Kubat.

It would be open from 7 a.m.-1 p.m. Fridays only, according to Bob O'Neill, president of the Grant Park Conservancy.

O'Neill hailed the deal as a major step toward bringing more activity to the south end of the park. He said he expects about 20 vendors to take part initially, selling bread, cheese, fresh fruit, frozen meats and other products.

"There's a built-in residential market with people living in the South Loop close to that site," O'Neill said.

Ald. Robert Fioretti (2nd) supports the plan. "The end of the park there has always been a little desolate. This will bring some excitement to the area," he said.

A company representative declined to discuss the proposal because the deal has not been finalized.

Indie rock, Wrigley style

Chicago Tribune

Canadian indie rockers Arcade Fire, who took home the Grammy for album of the year in February, will sing "Take Me Out to the Ballgame" during the seventh-inning stretch at Saturday's game between the Cubs and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The band, a hit at last year's Lollapalooza in Grant Park, is in town to perform Friday night, Sunday and Monday at the UIC Pavilion.

Not to put any pressure on the band, but they just might provide the spark needed to kick start the Cubs' season.

"It's been kind of a dismal spring when it comes to weather and attendance, but hopefully this will infuse a little life into this ballpark," said Cubs Manager of Entertainment Joe Rios, who oversees the process of choosing who serenades the fans at Wrigley.

The band joins a list of nearly 600 performers who have told fans to "Root, root, root for the Cubbies" since 1998, from the beloved (Ron Santo) to the bumbling (Ozzy Osbourne). The band got the official invite after someone from their camp contacted a friend who works for the Cubs, Rios said.

The Cubs invite celebrities of all kinds to sing "Take Me Out to the Ballgame"—a tradition that began after the 1998 death of Harry Caray, who sang the song from his perch in the broadcast booth. But the team also frequently gets requests from publicists whose clients want the honor, Rios said.

Still, some of Chicago's biggest celebrities—including Michael Jordan and Oprah Winfrey—have turned down all of the team's requests so far, Rios said.

Coyote killed by car near Lincoln Park Zoo

Chicago Tribune

A coyote was struck and killed by a car in Lincoln Park on Thursday morning—and officials say they are seeing more of the predatory animals roaming city streets in search of rabbits, rats and other prey.

The coyote ran out into traffic on Fullerton Parkway north of the Lincoln Park Conservatory and Lincoln Park Zoo just before 7:30 a.m., according to Chicago Police News Affairs Officer Robert Perez.

The coyote was dead when Chicago Animal Care and Control officers arrived on scene, according to Cherie Travis, executive director of animal control.

The car did not sustain any damage, Perez said.

Many coyotes in the Chicago area are part of a study that's been going on since 2000, but the animal that was killed was not wearing a tracking collar, said Dr. Donna Alexander, head of Cook County's animal control.

The coyote will be taken to a University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine facility in Chicago for a necropsy, Alexander said. The examination will look at what diseases the animal had, what food it had been eating and other details of its health and death, Alexander said.

What's up with gas? Feds want to know

4 WASHINGTON Prodded by growing public frustration over sharply rising gasoline prices, the Justice Department on Thursday announced the formation of a team—the Oil and Gas Price Fraud Working Group—tasked with the goal of ensuring consumers are not victims of price gouging.

Gas prices exceeding $4 per gallon are “tough” for most Americans, President Obama told an audience in Reno, Nev. “We are going to make sure that no one is taking advantage of American consumers for their own short-term gain.”

“This gas issue is serious,” Obama said. “It hurts.”

Attorney General Eric Holder made no secret the move is a direct response to public angst, not to current evidence of any illegal conduct.

“Rapidly rising gasoline prices are pinching the pock-

SOUNDS LIKE WINNING

IN ANOTHER HARD-FOUGHT GAME, BULLS FIND A WAY TO WIN—HERE'S HOW WE CALLED IT

RedEye

As fans, we love to get caught up in the excitement of sports. If we had a nickel for every time we jumped off our couch and yelled “Oh my God, did you see that?!”—sometimes to no one in particular—we’d have a year’s worth of beer money. Someone like Bulls TV commentator Stacey King has the best of both worlds, as he gets to whip up catchphrases as he watches games—and get paid for it. He’s got his “Gimme the hot sauce!” and “Too big, too fast, too strong, too good,” which are rapidly gaining popularity in Chicago. But why should guys like King have all the fun? We at RedEye wanted in, so here are our best, off-the-cuff calls from Thursday’s game.

“YOU’VE BEEN HIT BY THE THREE #6 MAFIA”

You know you’re in trouble when Keith Bogans is playing the role of sharpshooter for the Bulls. The man in the No. 6 jersey hit one of his trademark early-first-quarter 3-pointers at 10:51, putting the Bulls up 5-3.

Noah

“WELCOME TO ZOMBIELAND!”

Joakim Noah scares everyone, including his teammates, with the awkward way he drives the lane. But the Bulls aren’t going to complain about results, like his stiff-armed layup that gave the Bulls a 9-7 advantage.

“FOSTER—THAT’S AUSTRALIAN FOR ‘I HAVE NO REAL SKILL, SO I’M JUST GOING TO FOUL PEOPLE.’”

Pacers forward Jeff Foster drew a verbal beatdown from Derrick Rose after roughing up the Bulls guard on his way to the basket with 5:59 left in the third quarter. Carlos Boozer had to restrain Rose before the incident escalated. Then, as Deng attempted a jumper in the lane with 1:59 left in the third, Foster lowered a WWE-style elbow slam atop the Bulls forward’s head. Be careful—you mess with the Bulls, you might get the horns.

Bogans
GETTY IMAGES

“CALL MALNATI’S, ‘CAUSE LU DELIVERS”

Luol Deng was on fire early, hitting shots from all over the court and keeping the Bulls in the game while Derrick Rose struggled to solve the Pacers’ traps. At one point, Deng had almost half the Bulls’ points in the first half.

“BETTER DUCK AND COVER, PACERS—THIS IS TAJ BALL.”

The Bulls extended their lead to 23-17 to start the second quarter when C.J. Watson dished to Taj Gibson for a wicked two-handed stuff.

“DON’T FORGET YOUR FREQUENT FLIER MILES.”

With 44.8 seconds left in the third, Deng sent two Pacers flying with a fake in the lane, then stepped past them for the easy two.

“WHO WANTS TOAST?”

With the score tied at 84 and 33.4 seconds left, everyone knew the Bulls would let Rose work his magic. Three Pacers met Rose at the rim, and he still burned them with a left-handed layup, putting the Bulls ahead for good.

“The D-day attack has been launched”

With a chance to win the game with a 3-pointer, Pacers star Danny Granger was swarmed by the Bulls’ D and was forced to take an off-balance, desperation 3 with 2.9 seconds left. Haven’t you heard? Defense wins championships.

Our journey began, as they often do, with little more than an idea – to create a premium cigarette that was free of additives. Once that goal was achieved, our next stop was the creation of earth-friendly growing programs, and then tobacco grown under organic specifications, to lessen our farmers’ impact on the environment. We’re proud to have produced the first cigarette made with organic tobacco.

We continued on to blends that celebrate American traditions. Along the way, we met the caretakers of a centuries-old process of aging tobacco in oak barrels. Our Perique blend styles carry on that heritage. And as we met more and more farmers, they inspired us to create our 100% U.S. Grown blend, to support our communities and the environment.

HAWKS LIVIN' LARGE

What, you expected hugs and handshakes? On the contrary, the Blackhawks expected bad blood when they ran into Vancouver in the playoffs for the third straight year. They might not have expected this level of physical play, however. The Hawks finally woke up in Game 4, and they needed another strong effort Thursday to avoid elimination. Here's how the combatants fared. REDEYE

FIRST PERIOD

After killing off a penalty in the opening minute, the Hawks answered with a powerful combination. Marian Hossa struck first, on a Hawks power play at 5:54, weaving into the heart of the Vancouver defense and firing one past Roberto Luongo for a 1-0 lead. Duncan Keith connected 24 seconds later, beating Luongo into the upper left corner from just inside the blue line. Patrick Kane then redirected a Keith slap shot into the net at 12:17. The ringside doctor had better be ready. SCORE: Hawks 3, Vancouver 0

SECOND PERIOD

Just 1:26 into the period, Hossa delivered an uppercut as he beat Luongo with a wrist shot on a breakaway; Luongo was pulled immediately afterward. The Hawks weren't done, however. Keith used a great screen to beat Cory Schneider low to the stick side, and the Canucks looked ready to throw in the towel. Vancouver did take the fight to the Hawks in a different way, igniting a skirmish at the end of the period that involved a half-dozen players and yielded a handful of penalties. SCORE: Hawks 5, Vancouver 0

THIRD PERIOD

The Canucks had little fight left in them in the third period. Aside from a few bone-rattling hits, both teams looked more interested in conserving energy than dishing out more punishment. Vancouver's Mikael Samuelsson did serve a double minor after he caught Niklas Hjalmarsson in the face with his stick but looked apologetic after he committed the penalty. Consider this a game a TKO for the Hawks. Can they score another knockdown in Sunday's Game 6 in Chicago? SCORE: Hawks 5, Vancouver 0

1 A day off in Indianapolis during the NBA playoffs is like ...	... the most fun you can have getting off I-69.	... like carrying an umbrella in the desert.	... eating plain yogurt mixed with oyster crackers and a glass of water. BLANDTASTIC!	Ever tried to find a restaurant open after 9 p.m. in Indy? It's not exactly ground zero for whoopin' it up.	... "Stay in the hotel room and dial up some ..." never mind.
2 What exactly is a Pacer, anyway?	Popular in the 1970s, it is bulky, unstylish and has trouble changing gears.	Googled it and the first thing up is Public Access to Court Electronic Records. Fits.	A horribly misspelled ripoff of a Green Bay franchise.	The guy holding the sign in a marathon and holding you back from sprinting like a rookie.	I had one installed for my heart during the playoffs. No wait, that's a pacemaker.
3 How happy are the Blackhawks to be out of Vancouver?	Depends. Could be a Luongo trip home.	I expect a lot of Froliking and chiKanery.	I'm not making a limo joke here, no matter how hard you try to make me.	Pretty freakin' glad, eh, hoser?	As happy as Napoleon to be out of Russia. A butt-whoooping, but at least it's over!
4 How do you explain the Cubs briefly being in first place this week?	"If you ain't first, you're last." Cubs manage to be both. The cream of the crap.	Clearly the devil's secretary made a clerical error.	I'll tell you how it happened: because this is the year.	About as well as I could explain crop circles or the Bermuda Triangle.	Maybe the rest of the league was on spring break? Inexplicable, really.
5 Hey, the Chicago Rush play Friday. What do you know about that?	Not much. I don't see a lot of play on Rush.	Tracy knows all about the Friday Rush hour.	Rush kicker Chris Gould is Bears kicker Robbie Gould's bro. For real.	Uh, I know the mascot is Dancin' Steve. Whatever the heck a Dancin' Steve is.	It's a good Friday indeed if you're that starved for entertainment!

No. 1 receiver hard to catch

The Bears' search for a No. 1 wide receiver continues, but Jerry Angelo doesn't see any solutions in the draft.

The general manager didn't rule out the possibility of finding a bigger target, the kind that has been missing on the roster.

"We'd like to get the big receiver like everybody," Angelo said. "So much has been made about the No. 1 receiver. Hard to find a No. 1 receiver. We've looked at the position hard. I don't anticipate that we see anybody that is going to fit that definition, but we do like the receiver group, given how they complement what we have."

"I don't think the Giants have had a Pro Bowl receiver, at least in the last 20 years. They have always had a pretty good offense. When we were in Tampa, our offense wasn't stellar, but I just don't want to overrate the

U.K. IS OK

General manager Jerry Angelo said the Oct. 23 game with the Buccaneers at London's Wembley Stadium shouldn't be disruptive because the team is off the following week. "We'll obviously do a lot of homework on it," he said. "... I talked to [Patriots coach Bill] Belichick at the owners meeting. They went [in 2009]. He said logistically it's a little challenging."

position, and we certainly like our receiver corps, and we certainly want to build on it, but that's not the end all."

It's hard to overrate the position, though, when it's a passing league and the team has put so much of its future in the performance of quarterback Jay Cutler.

This bland 'Water' needs some flavor

Today, 90-something-year-old Jacob (Hal Holbrook) is a nostalgic fusspot surprisingly eager to re-tell the story of one of history's greatest circus disasters. It starts in 1931 when Jacob (played as a young man by Robert Pattinson) hops a train and becomes part of a traveling circus, where he cares for the animals and falls for the wife (Reese Witherspoon) of the temperamental ringmaster (Christoph Waltz).

fast

twitter.com/
mattpais

'Water for Elephants'

The buzz: So Pattinson's attempting to distance himself from "Twilight" ... by starring in a love triangle as a character named Jacob. Based on Sara Gruen's best-selling novel, "Water for Elephants" has to overcome a truly gag-worthy tagline: "Life is the most spectacular show on earth." As opposed to what, "Keeping Up with the Kardashians"?

The verdict: Pattinson's vacant brooding serves him fine as an emotionally unavailable vampire. It's not enough in "Water for Elephants," in which his range of expression stretches from mildly curious to sort of interested. That leaves the room-temperature love story stranded and Witherspoon with a role that slips through her fingers; only Waltz commands the screen, slinking between friendliness and fury as a guy who will stab an elephant repeatedly if that's what it takes to make it move. Excluding its wild animals, "Water for Elephants" mostly sits calmly, telling the story of a supposedly "big life" without the proper majesty or tension. Even lions yawn sometimes.

Did you know? Before they were killed in a car accident, Jacob's parents believed that nobody with half a brain could be poor in America. Nothing like optimism that's heavily coated in condescension.

It's been a little awkward for 'Water for Elephants' heartthrob Robert Pattinson as he squirms his way through interviews

Jimmy Fallon pegged Robert Pattinson all wrong. The late-night comedian's running sketch shouldn't be "Robert Is Bothered," it should be "Robert Is Awkward," because despite Pattinson's mega-success, he never looks like he's enjoying the spotlight. Ever. Whether it's because of his tall, lanky frame or plain ol' discomfort with being a sex symbol, Rob always comes across as fidgety and cringingly ill at ease. And he's never seemed more so than while promoting his new flick, "Water for Elephants." Here's evidence of Pattinson's awkwardness, from himself and his co-workers, who certainly aren't doing him any favors. ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

Bonding over 'Elephants'

Los Angeles Times

Robert Pattinson's experience on the set of "Water for Elephants" was a far cry from his current job, finishing the grueling six-month shoot for the last two "Twilight" films.

Pattinson took a moment for a brief phone interview about "Elephants," which opens Friday, before he was needed on the set of a night shoot for the vampire mega-hit. He seemed downright exhausted. "I'm just arriving at set, thinking I'm going to work all night," he said. "I'm kinda losing my mind."

Sorry to hear you're so exhausted. Can you tell us what your time was like on the set with Reese Witherspoon?

It's easily one of the best experiences I've had making a film, and it's by far one of the best experiences in my life. It didn't even feel like work, and a lot of that had to do with Reese. She makes an effort to make it like that. I think she believes that it's really important to enjoy your work, especially when you have to be there for so many hours every day. I made a great friend out of it.

How did working with the animals impact the environment?

When you have totally unpredictable elements, and there are dangerous elements in every single scene, everyone is in the same boat. If you're trying to herd up a pack of horses, it doesn't matter who you are. There is manure everywhere, and everyone was filthy all the time. It was an egalitarian set because of that. It's quite inspiring to be around [the elephant]. It doesn't really matter what your taste is, everyone is going to like being around an elephant. It's not like being around another actor some people may not like.

Reese mentioned that she found the paparazzi attention on you unlike anything she's seen before. What do you think?

She's trying to sound humble about all this, but she's in all these magazines every week. It's a circus outside her marriage. Plus, I always see her [in them] buying her sandwiches and going to yoga. ... I guess she's kind of accepted it in a lot of ways ... It's just a strange situation to be in if you're a sane person to have that kind of attention put on you.

Putting words in a lion's mouth

In the wilds of Kenya, apparently there are two rival families of lions: one led by Fang and one led by Kali. Elsewhere, a single mother named Sita (yes, it's pronounced Seeta the cheetah) works to protect five cubs on her own. How do we know this? Because narrator Samuel L. Jackson says so, punk.

The buzz: Disney nature previously delivered the powerful "Earth" and the annoyingly vague "Oceans." Now Disney's returning to "Lion King" territory for a movie that, no joke, really does focus on the circle of life.

The verdict: Who doesn't like seeing lion cubs playing? That's an undeniable win, and fortunately "African Cats" also offers profound moments in which the creatures' behavior speaks to all mammals' natural commitment to family and survival. A lion backing down a crocodile and tipping over a turtle is pretty great too. I just wish the script didn't put words in the animals' mouths. Mr. Jackson, how do you know that cubs remember their previous encounter with hyenas?

'African Cats'
DISNEY

Did they say so? I'd much rather hear what gazelles think as they screech and run from a lion. Based on the noise they make, it's assumedly, "Oh, crap."

Did you know? One lesson we're apparently supposed to learn is, "Never get fresh with an ostrich." Hope this doesn't alter your social calendar too much.

ON TV

Watch Matt on You & Me This Morning, 7 a.m. Fridays on WCIU, The U.

With South Africa ravaged by apartheid-related civil war, a handful of photographers ignore gunfire and any actual information about the conflict while hoping to snap iconic photos. Since even a country plagued by violence has room for a love story, Greg (Ryan Phillippe) hits on and immediately dates his boss, Robin (Malin Akerman), while Kevin (Taylor Kitsch) indulges his fondness for weed, since cops are often too scared to get out of their cars.

The buzz: "The Bang Bang Club" is based on a true story, including what happens after a Pulitzer Prize-winning picture sparks a controversy about photographers' responsibility to help their subjects. You'll be glad to know that all actors involved handle their accents just fine.

The verdict: At no point does "The Bang Bang Club" offer a sense of how anyone on screen, behind a gun or behind a lens, got to this place. Real or not, Greg and Robin's romance is a major distraction in a movie that presents photographers as a danger-embracing, adrenaline-pumping family without identifying why they want to do this in the first place. "The Bang Bang Club" doesn't seem to know what story it's telling, but it's hard not to be drawn in by the performances (Kitsch's in particular) and the question of what journalists and their work can and should be used for. Less effective is the implication that Pulitzer Prizes are given out immediately after someone does something great. Is the committee just sitting by the computer waiting to hand out an award?

Did you know? A particularly graphic photo isn't used in the newspaper because, as one editor says, "Readers might find it a bit much over their Rice Krispies." Because tragedy is easier to swallow over Cocoa Puffs?

SCREAM 4

@MattSTKC: Scream 4- Wes Craven at his best! As good as the original and best sequel ever. Fun, scary and just simply awesome!

@guacamof87: Scream 4 was sick! Surpassed its hype and made me want more!

@pspuppy: #Scream4 seems to make fun of itself. Bad writing + scientific implausibility = laugh-out-loud-good-time.

YOUR HIGHNESS

@katiekapoww: Your Highness has the hilarious Danny McBride and the lovely Natalie Portman who is stunning and funny. Win.

@Ms_SilverScreen: Your Highness is offensive, off-putting, and so awesome. Abundant laughs, vulgarity, and oh, Natalie Portman. Nice.

OTHERS

@notesangern: Super was ... hardcore.

A violent dark comedy not afraid to go there when you weren't sure if it would. Juno is a "sexy" scene-stealer @ck1dog: Saw Arthur, then re-watched the original. New is better in (almost) every way. Funnier, sadder, more intelligible.

@MrsEvaMorales: hi, watched Source Code last night and it wasn't all that. Hmmm. Great scenery and aerial views of #chicago!

@NicoleLynnHdz: Went to see Limitless on Sat. Phenomenal film! I wish I could have superb abilities to use more than 20% of my brain too!

@salkken: Stunning breakout role for Saoirse Ronan as teen assassin Hanna. Much fun watching cat-and-mouse with CIA agents.

@jessedbarnes: The Lincoln Lawyer: great movie full of some awesome suspense. Check it out. Nice to see Matthew McConaughey kick some butt

@katiekapoww: Win Win is a win! This movie has a whole lotta heart and does not follow the cookie cutter format of so many films.

Robert Pattinson and Reese Witherspoon—and elephant co-star Tai—in 'Water for Elephants'
20 CENTURY FOX FILMS

Witherspoon riding high in circus drama

Reuters

Reese Witherspoon can flip over backward on her latest co-star, who in turn can either hoist the actress in the air or crush her.

We're not talking about either "Twilight" heartthrob Robert Pattinson or "Inglourious Basterds" villain Christoph Waltz, with whom she stars in the new romantic drama "Water for Elephants," opening Friday. But rather, Tai—a 42-year-old, 9,200-pound pachyderm at the unwitting center of a dangerous Depression-era love triangle—shares the spotlight with the Oscar winner.

"Water for Elephants" required Witherspoon to acquire instant expertise doing elephant acrobatics while wearing sequined leotards and elegant gowns.

"These are skills that people develop over years and years of training, and I had to condense that into five months," the Nashville-raised actress said. "But it was really rewarding."

Witherspoon joked that one of her greatest accomplishments was learning how to step on Tai's trunk and hurdle herself on top of the 8-foot-8-inch animal.

"Water for Elephants," based on Sara Gruen's 2006 best-selling novel, stars Pattinson as a veterinary student named Jacob who abandons his studies and joins a traveling circus. He meets Witherspoon's character, Marlena, who is inconveniently married to the brutal animal trainer, August, played by Waltz.

When August buys an untrainable elephant named Rosie, Jacob is put in charge. He soon develops a special bond with the animal and then with Marlena, who must learn to ride it. When romantic sparks start to fly, life gets dangerous.

Things are happier for Oscar-winning Witherspoon in real life. Last month, she married talent agent Jim Toth at her California ranch. Witherspoon started shooting "Elephants" a few months after meeting Toth last year, and marveled at how her uneducated movie character overcomes the odds and finds true love.

"Some of the most beautiful scenes are the ones that have no words—moments where my character is noticing Rob, or Christoph's character seeing us across the room. It just tells you so much about the story without saying a word," she said.

The movie also shines a light on animal abuse and karmic retribution. Tai, fortunately, leads a comfortable life on a California ranch alongside five other elephants waiting for their next Hollywood close-up.

"Hopefully, this movie will build compassion for different elephant charities, that we really have to protect animals in this world," Witherspoon said. "They're very complex, thoughtful creatures, and they deserve our attention."

Spring up on you!

DINING
SCENE

It's already been a great season for new spots

By Lisa Arnett

Spring may not have delivered on a solid stretch of warm weather yet, but it certainly has brought a fresh crop of new eateries. And from a tiny doughnut-hawking shop and a bustling oyster bar in River North to the biggest restaurant opening of the year by celebrity chef Grant Achatz, just about everyone is lining up to get a taste.

NOW OPEN

Fogon

1235 W. Grand Ave. 312-421-2000

This fresh Mexican eatery in West Town from the owners of Amelia's Mestizo Grill boasts a spacious planter-lined patio that will make you wish (even more than you already do) it was just warm out. On a recent visit, dishes were hit or miss; we say pass on the lobster empanada but try the corn-truffle quesadillas and well-balanced take on a skinny margarita.

U.B. Dogs

185 N. Franklin St. 312-251-7009

This nook of a hot dog joint is doling out Chicago-style franks and Italian beef sandwiches to hungry Loop workers. The owners are giving away 100 free lunches to celebrate the opening May 1; sign up on ubdogs.com for a chance to win.

MORE RECENT OPENINGS

Calabruzzi's Cafe

(3302-04 S. Halsted St. 773-247-9999), an Italian eatery in Bridgeport.

Antico (1946 N. Leavitt St. 773-489-4895), a coffee shop by day and trattoria by night in Bucktown.

Uptown Pie Co. (1319-21 W. Wilson Ave. 773-334-5450), a sweet and savory pie shop.

Real Kitchen (1433 W. Montrose Ave. 773-281-2888), gourmet takeout in Ravenswood.

Made-to-order fast food spot Flavor 180 (1511 S. State St. 312-291-0800) and cafe Overflow Coffee Bar (1550 S. State St. 312-772-2356), both in the South Loop.

Forever Yogurt (931 W. Belmont Ave. 773-770-6953) and Tangcups (905 W. Belmont Ave. 773-698-7072), fro-yo shops in Lakeview.

Al's No. 1 Italian Beef (3420 N. Clark St. 773-935-2333), a Wrigleyville outpost of the local sandwich chain.

Avocado Cafe & Eatery

(1913 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-442-2333), a vegetarian-friendly Bucktown cafe.

Bobo's Market-Cafe

(1953 W. Chicago Ave. 312-226-8198), a health-centric Ukrainian Village sandwich shop.

Tolotzin Mexican

Restaurant (4431 N. Broadway, 773-334-4300), a family-owned Mexican eatery in Uptown.

GT Fish & Oyster 531 N. Wells St. 312-929-3501

Giuseppe Tentori, the G.T. behind this River North seafood bar, tells us the staff shucked more than 500 oysters a night during opening week in late March. Though the menu's classic dishes (clam chowder, lobster rolls, Key lime pie) are solid, the more contemporary dishes, such as smoked salmon with pickled cucumber and barbecue eel atop wasabi octopus salad, are the most memorable.

Next

953 W. Fulton Market 312-226-0858

Perhaps you've heard of this little time-traveling, tickets-only restaurant from Grant Achatz and the Alinea team? The restaurant is just more than two weeks into its Paris 1906 menu, which will run through June 30 before rebooting to a new time and place. Though the initial release of tickets sold out, a few more tables are being released daily on the restaurant's ticket site, only to be snatched up within seconds by fans incessantly clicking the refresh button.

Doughnut Vault

401½ N. Franklin St.

Expect down-the-block lines as opening buzz continues for this cash-only closet of a bakery from the owner of neighboring Gilt Bar. The verdict? The doughnuts are better than average, but don't yet surpass the gourmet creations at Nightwood.

THE COUNTDOWN The latest ETA on coming-soon spots

Y'all ready for this?

Of the countless Chicago bands out there, nearly 140 submitted to our eighth annual Rock 'n' Vote contest. We chose the top 10, now you've chosen the Final Four that will play a free show May 4 at Hard Rock Cafe. Who are those bands? Go to chicago.metromix.com/rock right now to hear the acts, which run the gamut from rock to rap to soul to pop-punk. Your votes at the show will help determine the ultimate Rock 'n' Vote winner, and one lucky concertgoer will win a trip to London, courtesy of Hard Rock Cafe. In other words: You need to be there.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

The #Lolla lineup's coming next week. What Chicago bands should be on the list and why?

Here are some answers we liked from Twitter and Facebook. Follow @mmxmusic and watch for next week's question.

TWITTER

@EmilyE_DID

dressed in decay because they know how to rock the stage and get peoples attention appearance wise and musically.

@willias1

A trio of hip hip acts, Lupe, Common, and Kanye (head-lining). Up and comers the Smith Westerns and the Cool Kids

@michelletweet

Always nice to see #Wilco or #Tweedy in the #Lolla lineup.

@amizzzle

makeshift prodigy should play lolla! their live show is the best i've seen in chicago by far!

@BopCityBeats

Andrew Bird is always a hit at #Lolla. I'd love to see @orchardlounge, and my favorite hip hop @djintel, finished with Kanye.

FACEBOOK

Mason Payne?

Furious Frank...cuz i can't afford the ticket price.

Patty Ortiz

Kanye Mofo West!! he should be playing that bulls music here in grant park not out on the desert at coachella!!

Colin Joliat

Pet Lions. I love when the local bands represent for the city!

Leslie Hunter

I would love it if the original Smashing Pumpkins crew got back together...but I'm going to say Rise Against. They put on an amazing show and with all of the political upheaval happening right now, having the huge stage would be helpful to get more of the message out.

Tiffanie MadameGigglez

Thomas

FOB should re-unite @ the lollapalooza

Marco Solis

Rise against and Disturbed. They could headline the whole show!

Lyn Marchluk?

Lovehammers - they've been going strong in Chicago for 20 years and definitely deserve to play Lolla! They put on a great live show!

James Ess

local H. it's really about time.

Here's What Our Customers Are Saying About Us...

"This will be my second car that I have purchased from Al Piemonte Chevy. The sales team here treats you well (like family) and are always willing to work with you. I would recommend doing business with them!"
Elgin, IL

"My wife and I came in to see the vehicles. We were very happy how they took care of us. They are very friendly and we didn't have to wait long for an answer. My family has come here to buy all their vehicles. We won't go anywhere else. I always recommend Al Piemonte Chevy to my family and friends. And we are always very satisfied with our purchases. Thank you for the hard work!"
Poplar Grove, IL

"The best buying experience ever. They met all of our needs and went above and beyond to find the car that we wanted with the specifics that we need. I can't wait to trade in our other car!"
Lake In The Hills, IL

"Wow!!! What a good crew of guys. I could not be more please with this experience. We will be coming back and will tell all of our friends and family about Al Piemonte Chevy. Thank you for the great customer service and awesome experience!"
North Aurora, IL

UNDER THE INFLUENCE

Time picked these celebs as 'most influential'—but are they really?

By Ariel Alexovich | REDEYE

Time magazine released its "Time 100" list Thursday, supposedly a carefully crafted grouping of the most influential people in the world. (Of course, you should take any "most" list featuring Justin Bieber not titled "overexposed" with a grain of salt.) The best part? The mag gets other famous people on board to author supremely flattering writeups of each influential person. Mostly it's politicians and business execs who dominate the list, but here's a roundup of a few celebs who snuck in there too.

BLAKE LIVELY

What Baz Luhrmann says:

"She makes you feel that she, and life, are going to go on forever."

What we say: We would give up immortality to have hair as nice as hers for just one day.

JUSTIN BIEBER

What Usher says: "The reality of who he is and what he's accomplished far exceeds anybody's expectations of him."

What we say: True. We expected Bieber to have gone the way of J.T.T. and Andrew Keegan by now.

CHRIS COLFER

What Dianna Agron says: "To witness the power he gives to his audience firsthand? It's wonderful."

What we say: Like you didn't get teary during Colfer's Golden Globes acceptance speech.

AMY POEHLER

What Aziz Ansari says: "In comedy, a lot of what you see feels derivative and uninspired; with Amy, 39, there is always something fresh and unexpected."

What we say: You know what was unexpected? When a painkiller'd-up Leslie Knope made a scarf out of jeans on "Parks and Rec."

MIA WASIKOWSKA

What Glenn Close says: "Mia, 21, is a sun, not a satellite. She generates her own energy."

What we say: All this galactic talk makes us feel more tripped out than Johnny Depp's Mad Hatter.

BRUNO MARS

What B.o.B says: "He has a musicality, a presence in his voice that I've never heard from anyone else."

What we say: If influential means getting millions of people to "take a grenade for you," then, yes, influential.

Beckinsale

Farrell

On (re)call?

Here's an interesting pairing. Kate Beckinsale has been offered a lead role to pair with Colin Farrell in a remake of the action-thriller "Total Recall," according to deadline.com. She reportedly would reprise the role played by Sharon Stone in the original. Are Farrell and Beckinsale good choices for the "Total Recall" remake? Text "total1" for yes or "total2" for no to 87708. You'll get the results instantly.

Brown bullies

Turns out Hogwarts isn't the only place Hermione is getting harassed. The New York Daily News reports that Emma Watson was heckled in her classes at Brown University for answering professors' questions correctly. According to the paper, "Three points for Gryffindor!" was the most popular quip. Careful kids, she's got a wand.

Pia's new gig

"American Idol's" loss is "Dancing with the Stars'" gain. Pia Toscano, whose dismissal from "Idol" drew jeers from across the celebsphere, will be on "DWTS" next week. But it's not to show off her moves—she'll sing while rumored boyfriend Mark Ballas takes to the dance floor.

La vida Lopez

She's already People's most beautiful woman. Now Jennifer Lopez wants her own singing competition TV show, according to billboard.com. Lopez, who is on a one-year contract with "American Idol," reportedly is shopping a show in which she would work with husband Marc Anthony to discover talent in Latin America.
